After about eight minutes into the level, there's this bug that'll toss you over the wall, right back to the beginning.. If it took me like 10 seconds to get back, maybe, but it's just stupid with how slow you move.. I'm thinking "Why should I care about these?" I eventually realized after going to the home screen there's a shop where you can buy a "slow-mo" mode (because this game isn't slow enough) and some other locked features.. I had hoped it would be one of the powerups that I somehow hadn't encountered 40 minutes into this game yet.. Come on It's level three The fifth level has a floating clear pyramid with a "?" in it.. I had high hopes for this game When checking out the steam page it reminded me of Marble Blast.. When checking out the steam page it reminded me of Marble Blast Unfortunately, this game is very slow.. Deaths are unforgiving in this game, albeit easily avoidable I wouldn't mind as much as long as it wasn't in the first five levels.

The third level would send you back a couple minutes of this snail-like movement if you died (there's checkpoints, but they're not spreadout correctly).. Come on It's level three The fifth level has a floating clear pyramid with a "?" in it.. Local multiplayer battles are also in the works, which will put players head to head in a classic ball VS ball death match.. There's "shortcuts" and an "energy bar", both of which I have no clue what they are and I've played for almost an hour.. I feel like that should be like level 2/3 stuff Instead, I've gone through four or five levels of just rolling around.. I had hoped it would be one of the powerups that I somehow hadn't encountered 40 minutes into this game yet.. If it took me like 10 seconds to get back, maybe, but it's just stupid with how slow you move.. But no, it just dropped me in the middle of no where and fell to my death What the heck? That's not fun.
